Planning Your Transit Network

The last major transit expansion in Chicago was the Orange Line to Midway Airport, completed in the early 1980s, so the region is long overdue for transit expansion to keep up with population growth.

Planning and Evaluation

Not only is public involvement a good business practice, but it is also a requirement if a transit agency receives federal funds.

Public Involvement & Outreach

A Transit Development Plan TDP is a short-range plan that reviews and updates a transit agency's goals, evaluates the existing conditions and needs, and identifies ways to meet near-term and long-term needs and goals. For decades, decisions about street size and design in many communities have focused on getting as many cars as possible through the streets as quickly as possible. As part of the Section 5311 subrecipient grant application process, State DOTs typically require a public participation process that addresses the above requirements, including consultation with private operators and a public hearing or opportunity for one upon request about the proposed grant application.

Module 3: Public Transportation

Improving local public transit can cut vehicle transportation costs and time spent on commuting. The national dataset includes walkability scores for all block groups as well as the underlying attributes that are used to rank the block groups.
